Schools Superintendent Jody Goeler said two staff members of the adult education program at Hamden High School were diagnosed with COVID-19 this week and both quarantined in the area of the coronavirus health plan. Adult classrooms began at the school on Monday, and teachers informed the district's human resources director of their positive tests late Wednesday night, Goeler said. Hamden High School was closed for the rest of the week and the affected areas underwent a deep cleanup, he said. We wish both employees a speedy and full recovery, Goler said. According to him, school staff are not required to be tested for coronavirus before the start of the school year. As part of a return to the school plan, school administrators were focused on ensuring anyone in buildings should wear facial coverage and maintain social distancing guidelines, he said. The rest of the Hamden school district is due to begin on September 8. The Board of Education voted to introduce a hybrid model of personal and distance learning this year, with parents having the opportunity to have their children participate in fully distance learning. mdignan@hearstmediact.com and North Haven Public Schools have joined adult education programs to offer quality services to all residents. We believe that adult education is a start for people who need an alternative educational route, as well as for adult students looking to learn new skills, travel or enrich their lives with new information through continuing education. We provide many classes and programs for all residents of Hamden and North Haven.
